Good afternoon:
I read the Federal Register notice and was pleased to read such a rational approach to protecting privacy. As a senior citizen and one who has been involved in the discussion of the intersection of privacy, technology and privacy for nearly 15 years, I see only one gap: a comprehensive campaign to educate the public about staying secure on the Internet which will also help protect privacy. I believe the "See Something, Say Something" campaign is a model for how the US government could approach a similar educational public relations campaign related to privacy. Let's engage the AARP and other organizations to help reach the general public as well as our most vulnerable citizens.

Respectfully submitted,
Kathleen Carroll  CIPP  CiPP/G

--
Kathleen

In a democracy, agreement is not essential; participation is.